

Interbay Village

Interbay Village has successfully sheltered over 200 individuals including single adults, couples, families with children, and pets since its opening in November 2017. 62 of these residents have since transitioned into permanent housing. The village program is outperforming other shelter models throughout the City with rates of transitions into permanent housing as high as 49% at Interbay in 2019, compared to the average 4% of traditional shelters. On-site case management helps residents obtain housing, employment, healthcare, education, and other services.

The recent expansion of the village nearly doubled the number of tiny homes from 23 to 42, and included the addition of plumbed hygiene facilities. We are grateful to the many volunteers and donors that made the expansion possible.

Special thanks to the Port of Seattle for supporting the tiny house program and working with us to offer safe and dignified responses to homelessness.

Port Commissioner Peter Steinbrueck posing with a resident during a tour of the village.

Port Commissioner Courtney Gregoire helping with village build efforts.

Port Commissioner Peter Steinbrueck, Port staff, City staff, and Councilmember Bagshaw recently attended a celebration at Interbay Village hosted by LIHI and village residents to thank the Port.

Veronica M. Valdez, Commission Specialist, visiting the village.